

Through the generous support of the Honorable Donna Ellman Garber, “YELP” students are engaged in helping others. Students say they’ve been learning time management while having fun collaborating with each other. As mentors of younger Hope Street students, our “YELP”-ers say they’ve observed unique personalities among the younger children and have formed bonds with them. The students say they’ve observed how children learn differently and they’ve enjoyed helping younger students accept that it’s okay to be different. Some of the “YELP” students have siblings in the younger student group and they’ve noticed their siblings’ personalities are more outgoing and social at Hope Street than they are at home.

Movies start at dusk... around 8 p.m.

July 27th-- Finding Dory
August 3rd--Moana

While some “YELP” students say they’ve been pushed out of their comfort zone, they realize it’s helped them improve their own interaction skills, helped them to be more playful, and opened them up to discovering they have a passion for working with kids.

Herbert A. Lampert... ‘Hal’ to his friends... is a partner with Lampert & Eskridge, C.P.A.s, in Sherman Oaks, where he’s assisted by his wife, Sharon. Through their generosity, Hal and Sharon have made a significant difference in Hope Street’s ability to expand our after school programs.

We asked Hal how his career has influenced his desire to give back--“Through my profession, I have a broader vision of the business side of non-profit operations,” Hal told us, adding, “My financial position has impacted my philanthropy as I now have the ability to champion more charities to a greater financial extent.” Hal’s advice to others who want to make a difference: Commit yourself to charities you feel passionate about and decide what you will donate- your time, expertise and/or financial support.

“I’m inspired by Hope Street’s leaders, its dedicated Fund Development Committee members, others who support the cause, and most importantly, the passion of Hope Street’s students to pursue college degrees with a desire to give back to their community when they graduate,” Hal told us. What’s a perfect day for you, Hal?” we asked. “At my age,” Hal wryly chuckled, “There are no perfect days... only good ones or bad ones.”
